

Outdoor Rooms for Outdoor Living

This Moroccan inspired home is extended into the garden through a series of separate gardens connected within a unified exterior composition. Each outdoor room is artfully defined using structural and landscape elements. Just as the courtyard brings the outdoors in, the landscape extends the interior and reacts to the architecture seamlessly.

This project was a true collaboration between landscape, architecture and client, with the shared goal of extending the interior spaces throughout the gardens. The driveway design, informed by the axis of the house, diminishes the large bays of the garage. In the backyard, distinct outdoor rooms evoke unique emotions, yet harmonize through material selection, axis, and view framing. The result is a conversation between interior and exterior that is echoed throughout the project.
